Breakfast.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourself well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

FROM AN AMERICAN FRIEND.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 17, 1890.

TO THE EDITOR.—The recent election in this country in which the Republican party, the party of a high tariff, was overwhelmingly defeated demonstrates two things very clearly. The first is that the American people are becoming educated above blind partisanship and the second that they will not bear another out of taxation, of riot or of indifference. A peculiar feature of this election was that no body seemed to know anything about it. The Republicans counted on a good majority, the Democrats thought they would be in luck could they gain a dozen members of Congress. But the wave of popular indignation which had been gathering in the mysterious ocean of careful thought came bowling thundering in on the 4th of November like that great billow which rolls crashing each day up the bay of Fundy and the little tin gods, Reed, McKimley and Quay are cast high and dry upon the sand to wonder what it all means and why they were such idiotic asses as to so foolishly put their feet in it. Such revolutionary elections are always object lessons from which we can prophecy nothing but learn a great deal nevertheless. The country is just as likely to swing completely around in two years and this fear of political defeat is the only thing that will make our legislators honest. A man must be made of God's finest clay to resist temptation to peculate when in office. No one can properly appreciate this fact who has not had to fight against professional political plunderers, party bosses and the like. There are few statesmen who remain honest. They may never steal, themselves, but they make it easy for their friends to steal and what is the difference? The people now believe this and the moment a politician forgets his constituents for himself and his friends they light on him like a thousand of bricks. In this assurance every lover of liberty can rest happy. The day for the tyrant has gone by. This election also proves another fact, viz.: that the American people will not allow one of their number to mount from their shoulders to fame and stay there if they can help it. They are willing to see a man reach certain positions but as soon as he begins to crow and strut about they proceed in the most exasperating way possible to knock out his supports and down he comes wondering what struck him. A good proof of this assertion is James G. Blaine who as Democrats as well as Republicans aver is the smartest statesman in this country. Yet he has never been president and one hears as a reason on all sides, "Oh, he is too smart." That is just it, he knows too much, his friends stand in awe of him, he is original. No man knows just what he would do were he elected to this high office and so little men are placed above him not for any respect particularly for them but because the "uncrowned king" is a mystery and all the politicians are jealous of him. Finally this election proves another thing, viz.: that Americans demand a foreign market for their products and are willing to give as much as they take. Now is the time for Canada. We Canucks down here are all wondering and hoping against hope that at the next Dominion election a government will be elected which will at once open negotiations for reciprocity. We do not care whether it be Liberal or Conservative as long as it does this thing. When the people of any country look for principles before party then can they boast of freedom and education. Until then they must be ready to hear men jibe at them calling them slaves to a creed or to a faction. Party is very near the heart I know. One abhors the act of repudiating the party or the cause of his fathers but it must be done if human liberty is to be conserved. The great party of freedom in this country twenty-five years ago is now the party of oppression. Great principles forever remain but tradition has never made the world progressive. We must have invention, something new and wherever the party of the young men is there you will find the party of popular thought, of certain merit.

The Governor of Massachusetts elected last year was not much over 30 and in the same year Congressmen were elected only 30. These young men by the very force of Odessa.

Whilst the Army folks were doing the street parade last Sunday evening, having a side hold on the devil, as it were, the imps of boys, in a gang, were skirmishing around to find something to do. They struck the deserted barracks and moved in. Uh! Shortly ejaculated one, as he dove for the platform, "here's a go." He brought up a fiddle one of the soldiers had left there, and quickly pink, pink, punk, punk, punked it. She was in perfect tune, and the artist struck up at a rolling rate "the devil's dream" whilst the rest of the boys had jumped the platform and were more than hoing it down, when the returning parade, as they fired a volley, and now another, re-entered the hall—Tableau—Hush! Blank astonishment slightly mortified settled on the Army's countenance. The devil's dream was broken and the fiddle with a sudden screech left the artist's hand and slid under the bench every string and nerve quivering with the long neglected, but not forgotten "clog" since it had joined the Army. The boys acted as a chicken fished out of a swill barrel and slunk off to seats, when the meeting proceeded in regular order.
"Satan always finds some work, For idle hands to do."
Much there is going on in the children

as the result of the labors of these five people. Why is it that they don't get rich which we know they do not? They are not shiftless, they do not buy expensive clothes, they enjoy no such costly pleasures as concerts and operas. They subsist in reality on their garden and the rest of their produce goes to the non-producers who acquire it. First comes the tax gatherer, he demands his share. The farmer desires to be informed why this toll should be levied on him and is answered that for it he was promised good government, good schools, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. This is all very true, but a very few laws would have sufficed to protect him. He is willing to pay for good schools and as for the rest he does not quite see that it is just. He knows that he is taxed because the cities are full of crime and need a multitude of officials to keep order and because men who do not work but wish to live may continue to do so. Then he sells the balance to the dealers who only allow him what they choose, having even the affrontery to tell him of the number of sellers who must have their margin before it gets to the consumers who would kick if the price were too high. This money which he obtains he immediately transfers to his brother, the manufacturer in exchange for farming implements and clothes for his family. If he has any left which one out of every twenty does not, he goes to the city to see what has become of all his wealth, and finding there men living more splendidly and more easily than he, he concludes as I said, to come to the city. This is why the country is in such a state of affairs to-day, and why farmers now are leaving the farm for the city, this is why the city is full to overflowing and the farms are growing up to weeds, too bad, but nevertheless true. So much for vocation philosophy. It is a truth, a truth that appeals to the heart of every man who loves his country, that the Government as at present permits the wholesale robbery of the farmer.

Canada is first and last an agricultural country. Its future depends upon the stable and worthy population of the farms and the sooner this truth strikes home the better. This exodus from the country can only be checked by allowing the farmer to control the wealth he creates.

A CURIOUS EPIGRAPH.—The following curious epitaph may be seen on a tombstone in the cemetery here:
In memory of Adam Bowers, Who departed this life Nov. 16th, 1830. Aged 69 years
An honest man here lies at rest As e'er God with his image blest, The friend of man, the friend of truth, The friend of age, the guide of youth, Few hearts like his with virtue warmed Few heads with knowledge so informed If there's another world he lives in bliss If there's one he made the best of this Here beneath these earthly towers Lies the remains of Adam Bowers

POLITICAL AND GENERAL.

In its issue of Monday, in referring to a report that Larkin, Connolly & Co., had contributed $70,000 to bribery frauds, Le Canadian says that sum represents scarcely a tenth of the amount fished from the public treasury in the course of the frauds which it is about to expose, and that Mr. McGreevy himself handled four times that much. The Bleu papers in Quebec are evidently in a state of profound "funk." One of them asks, "What are we coming to? What does all this mean?" The answer is plain. It means that the master hand at Ottawa is no longer able to control the base agencies which he has employed to maintain his power. Furious squabbles among the instruments and beneficiaries of his rule are the order of the day. They are afar from edifying, but they serve a good purpose in letting light in upon the moral rottenness of his reign, now drawing to a close.

LONDON, NOV. 12.—The Wellington barracks of the Guards was destroyed by fire to-day. The fire originated on a staircase in the quarters of the married soldiers. The inmates were rescued by means of ladders. There were in the barracks a number of children suffering from measles who were wrapped in blankets, carried out and put to bed in another building. On the breaking out of the fire the troops responded promptly to the bugal call for fire parade and worked the hand apparatus with a will, the officers cheering them on. The fire was attended by many exciting incidents, and several heroic rescues were made and some painful scenes were witnessed. The women and children in the burning building implored wildly for help. When it was found that two children were missing, a soldier bravely re-entered the burning pile to search for them. Hearing screams issuing from the rafters on the top floor, he dismounted an iron bedstead, and with a piece of the iron broke away the ceiling until he found the children, when he rescued them unhurt. In trying to escape by a trap-door on the roof, they had lost themselves between the rafters and the tiles. The onlookers cheered the rescuer wildly. Over 20 persons were more or less injured by jumping from windows, and six were sent to hospital.

LONDON, NOV. 12.—The British torpedo cruiser "Serpent" has foundered off the coast of Spain. The fate of the crew is unknown. The "Serpent" was a twin screw vessel of 1,170 tons and 4,500 horse power. She carried six guns. The "Serpent" went on the rocks during a storm on Monday night. A heavy mist prevailed at the time. Owing to the violence of the storm it was impossible to send assistance from shore. Tremendous seas swept the decks of the doomed vessel, carrying away a group after group of the unfortunate men on board. Only three men survive. The news of the wreck was conveyed to Corunna, a distance of 60 miles over mountain roads. The "Serpent's" complement was 170 officers and men. One hundred and six others on board were going out to relieve men now on ships at the African stations. A Madrid despatch says the three persons saved from the "Serpent" are sailors, who swam ashore at Camorinas. They express the belief that all the others on board were drowned, but only four bodies have been washed ashore as yet. There is no telegraph station at Camorinas. The "Serpent" was a swift cruiser, one of eight commenced during the administration of Lord Northbrook. She was launched in 1887. Her officers were:—Commander, H. L. Ross; Lieutenants, Guy H. L. Granville and Troquell McLeod; surgeon, James W. Dixon; engineers, John J. Robins, William P. Edwards and F. W. Head. The "Serpent" started Saturday on her maiden voyage. She had a bad record. She broke down more than once in the manoeuvres of 1888. It appears the "Serpent" was running for shelter in the bay north of Finisterre. It is not known whether she foundered or grounded on the reefs.

QUEBEC, NOV. 12.—Early this evening there were crowds on the river front and at Lewis waiting the "Vancouver's" arrival. It was seven o'clock before she swung into moorings at the Grand Trunk wharf at 30. These young men by the very force of their genius and their inspirations forced a victory from a conservative commonwealth. The parliament at Ottawa needs more young men there. It is now a gathering of pre-Adamite fossils, men who are without originality, who cannot conceive of doing anything but remaining true to the principles of their great grandfathers. Canada has no use for such antediluvian fossils. She wants young men who will set, who will conceive. In his day Sir John Macdonald was a man who was of use to his country. He has outlived his day. He is now riding the country to death, a happy who will not be shaken off. I remember once shaking hands with him in the Hoffman House. Elijah Storr presented me. The gentleman was very affable. He said "I am always glad to see the young men, it is on them that the future of our country depends." I was much impressed with this sentiment but I have no need to believe that Sir John said things which were noble and did things which were base. Has he ever put any young men forward? Has he ever given anybody a chance? Not a bit of it. Like the devil fish he has sprawling over power stretching his feelers to the remotest corners of his country to seize and hold whatever he can. The young men of Canada will be old men before death side tracks this cunning old Scotchman. I would like to see him beaten once more just for luck as they say, and the Liberals of Canada can do it if they will place at the front young vigorous men like Mr. Preston of Toronto for instance and work and educate. Ignorance is the greatest bar in the way of progress. The man who doesn't know anything and won't learn anything but just sits down with his "T. D." and says "the old ways are the best ways and Sir John is good enough for me" is the obstacle which makes the Goddess of Liberty weep. There is so much to learn in these latter days, the air is sparkling with the electricity of thought, the sun is sailing in a clear sky so that all may read the signs. It is an age of activity, an age of advanced ideas. The young man who desires success must not be content to be as smart as anybody else, but smarter, for it is only the latter who achieve greatness. The day has gone by for the ordinary man. The world is full of educated men. He must be an originator of thought that will lead. To any young man who reads this letter honestly believing that reciprocity would be injurious to Canada's welfare, I would say, my friend sit down and reason it out. Don't accept what any one else says, but like a judge in a great case gather all the evidence pro and con and then think. It is a caution how few people use this human and Godlike quality of thought. There are those who would rather work than think. That the people of Lennox and Addington will not be behind in this educational campaign I feel certain, but the liberal teachers will find they will gain by spending the most of their effort in the front townships. I have lived in the rear and would not expect too much from the daily oration from Epastus Wiman himself in that section.

Much thievery is going on in the chicken line, not content with one or two for a stew, they clean the whole roost. James Fuller lost fifteen or so the other night, whilst Messrs. Spencer Hill.

It is nearly three years ago that I left a city overflowing with humanity. Its atmosphere polluted by a thousand tall chimneys, its rows and its walks unrelentingly hard, and its general appearance that of life in its most unromantic form, to shortly find myself a farmer, where a multitude of beauties await the beholder and where the beauties of nature are everywhere to be seen. I was very much surprised at first to see the country so thickly populated and so many leaving the farm for the city. I say this surprises me and the effect is the more mysterious in that no truly philosophic cause can be assigned for it. The country is the sole source of wealth, there is produced wheat, rye, barley, oats, potatoes, corn, flax, fruit, lumber, everything in fact, on which every day existence depends, and yet men move from this real wealth in pursuit of an unreal competence. Why is it? There must be a reason and we continue wondering until we work out solutions plausible, at least to ourselves. In his natural position the farmer is the regulator of commerce and the true dictator of values, but in the false position which he at present occupies he not only does not lead in the business of his country and fix values for his products which would allow him a profit for his labor and for his risk, but he has no voice whatever, apparently, in the business world.

The truth is that the farmer having his barns full of natural wealth at once becomes the victim of the non-producer. He is attacked by the tax gatherer, who takes his toll, by the clergyman, the merchant, the manufacturer, until he finds the better share of his wealth has passed from him into the city.

The farmer argues that the way in which these non-producers acquired their share of his product was much easier than his. He desires then to become a non-producer. He sells his farm, moves into the city, and becomes an insurance solicitor, a merchant, a banker or a manufacturer perhaps. Now having been a direct producer he cannot blind himself to the fact that he occupies a false position in society. There are only two things that a man absolutely requires in this world, food and clothing, including in the latter term such things as houses, fuel, etc. The farmer produces the former the manufacturer and the farmer produce the latter. Here then are the two direct sources of natural wealth, and yet there are ten thousand ways of getting food and clothes without engaging in either industry. In consequence the labor of the farmer and the manufacturer is the means of making existence possible for a thousand men. A fairly good two hundred acre farm, ought to produce at least 1500 bushels of grain and cereals, allowing a third of it for pasture and meadow land. On this farm there are say five persons. They for the better part of the year live directly from their garden and from their cattle which costs them nothing but labor, using but a small number of bushels of their produce in purchasing sugar, tea and necessary cooking spices and of course whatever plain garments are required. This leaves them a large surplus of wealth here.

Another wedding in high life, Mr. William Simpson has taken to himself a bundle of charms for better or worse for joy and sorrow I fear that there will be a surplus of sorrow.

We are all very sorry to hear that Mrs. John Brandon of the Lime Lake road is dangerously ill. There is little or no hope of her recovery.

Mrs. J. Cunningham of Bloomington is visiting her mother Mrs. B. McCann and renewing old acquaintances in this vicinity.

Rather lonely around here now, for the married women their better halves having gone to the woods for the winter.

They seem to be migratory birds they take to the bush as soon as the cold weather comes and come out in the spring.

The biggest query now is, Who is Aberham and his seed for ever and who is his wife? Next is who writes for the Express. All excitement and talk about Birchall's execution.

I think like the farmer and the fox. They were talking away the life of a fellow creature, that's a responsibility. It is a curious thing life, and who knows what comes after it. They say he is a murderer, he says he is not.

At any rate he ought not to be hanged, for if he is not he don't deserve it and if he is he should have time to repent.

I never believe in taking a life. The scriptures say the Lord gave and the Lord taketh away. Wherefore then should man put away the life of another.

However I suppose it is the law and we must abide by it hoping that it may be as strictly enforced in all respects.

Oh by the way Mr. Editor, who is young farmer, I tell you he is a boy after my own heart be he old or young.

I often wish I were a girl, now I wish it with all my gizzard. Wouldn't I find that young man though. Well you needn't guess again I would take him by the hand as a brother, or brother-in-law, either one, just so quick. At any rate he may consider himself shocked.

Leaving all jokes aside I am glad to see that one has the courage to give the preachers a sitting down. They are getting too much on a "money" string.

Oh Mr. Editor, Ladies and gentlemen, I take much pleasure in telling you that we are to have another one of those grand social gatherings called "Reunions" It is to be held at the residence of Mr. Robert McFarland on Wednesday evening November 26th admission 10 cents as usual, every body and his girl invited and promised a very pleasant, social evening.

I am going to be there and I will let you know what kind of a time we all have. I know I shall be perfectly happy if I meet my little Lollypop.

ROYLE & SON.

Ringling Notes.

In the ears, sometimes a roaring buzzing sound are caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also result from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for this disease, which it cures by purifying the blood. If you suffer from catarrh, try Hood's Sarsaparilla, the peculiar medicine.

—"It's only a question of time," and a short time, too, as to when your rheumatism will yield to Hood's Sarsaparilla. Try it.

"WE POINT WITH PRIDE"—To the "Good name at home," won by Hood's Sarsaparilla in Lowell, Mass., where it is prepared, there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold than of all other medicines, and it has given the best satisfaction since its introduction ten years ago. This could not be if the medicine did not possess merit. If you suffer from impure blood, try Hood's Sarsaparilla and realize its peculiar curative power.

The offensive breath, resulting from Catarrh, can be removed by a few applications of Nasal Balm. Every sufferer should give it a trial. Sold by all dealers.

It was seven o'clock before she swung into moorings at the Grand Trunk wharf at Lewis, where she was immediately boarded by press correspondents. First Officer Walsh was seen and, though tired out from several days spent almost entirely on deck, with only a meal snatched now and then for days, he kindly consented to give an account of the terrible accident. He said:—We left Liverpool on the 30th of October and Moville the following day at 5 p.m. and met with continual gales, veering from southwest to northwest, with high crossed seas. In these two of our boats were shoved in. Outside of this all went well till 5 a.m. on the 7th, when we shipped a tremendously heavy wave that looked like a tidal wave. It took off everything movable on the deck, including the chartroom, wheelhouse, bridge and all appertaining thereto, besides the ventilators, and flooded the saloon. The captain had gone into the wheelhouse of chartroom to sleep and had left me on the bridge with Third Officer Davis and Quartermaster McLaughlin. I said I would go down and talk to the "old man" about the weather and left the third officer in charge. I thought Captain Lindall had gone down to his room below, as he had always been in the habit of doing. I was going down the companion to the head of the alleyway when the sea struck the ship. One of the stewards was thrown down on top of me and fell in the alleyway. I picked him up and put him into one of my rooms. He seemed badly hurt. Just then Davis came running down and told me that the chartroom and bridge had been swept away and that the captain and quartermaster had been swept overboard. I told him to stop the ship and throw life belts over, but it was no use, for neither of the men could be seen afterward. The steering apparatus and everything was broken, so I sent down to the engine room to have the ship stopped. Then I connected the steering gear with the stern, got the ship's head to the sea and put her "slow ahead" to keep her head to the sea. The second officer told me afterwards that he had seen the captain smoking in his bunk in the chartroom. One of the quartermasters being sick Jas. Lawlor, a seaman, took his place in the wheelhouse. When it got carried away he got fouled in some of the wreckage, and was held fast and saved, though badly hurt. From the time of the accident till we arrived in the Straits of Belle Isle we had tremendously heavy weather. When we got into the Straits we encountered a heavy snow storm, if I could have turned back I would have done so, but it was impossible, and I had to grope my way along with the lead. We were in the Straits Sunday and Monday, and on Sunday night we had to turn her head to the sea. On Monday I would have liked to go back, had it been possible, but I had to come straight on. Twenty miles below Greenly Island we met with fine weather, and it continued fine until we got to Quebec. The name of the steward hurt is Charnock. Mr. Walsh excused himself from talking further. Third Officer Davis and a man named Edward Reynolds had a narrow escape from being drowned. Quartermaster McLaughlin was 24 years of age, and has a wife and two children in Liverpool and is said to have been a true seaman.

BIRCHALL'S LAST NIGHT.

To-morrow night these hands
Will nerveless be;
To-morrow night no blood
Will flow in me,
But yet to-morrow night
These eyes will see!

See what—and whom?—Oh, God!
Be merciful and dim
Mine eyes in that first hour.
When o'er the golden rim
Of Thy high world I see
The watching face of him.

I wonder will he speak
What agony in store;
To see him search my face
And look me o'er and o'er,
To hear him slowly ask,
"What would you do it for?"

Oh! spare me that great shame,
Then quickly sound my knell;
Oh! everything but that,
I'll meekly say 'tis well,
Yet, rather than meet that man
I'd hide in furthest hell.

And yet I fear and think,
Before my feet has trod
An inch on that strange land,
From out the living rod
His form will spring to meet me,
Spare—and forbid it, God!

CAPT. O'SHEA has succeeded in obtaining a divorce from his wife, on the ground of adultery with Mr. Parnell, the Irish leader. Neither Mr. Parnell nor Mrs. O'Shea made any attempt at defence, which it is altogether likely was the best course for them to pursue. Any political opponent who thinks this suit will drive Parnell into obscurity is apt to be mistaken. He may not lead the party in the House of Commons, indeed he has himself said he will not do so. But the power behind the movement is too much in Parnell's hands for the Leaguers to do anything effective without him, nor will they try to do so. The noble Captain O'Shea may in six months move to have the divorce granted him made absolute and in that case Mr. Parnell and Mrs. O'Shea will be at liberty to marry, and more unlikely things than this have happened. There is no doubt but that many politicians hoped the O'Shea suit would in some way stop the Home Rule agitation. It has of course done that cause no good and possibly not much harm. There are too many able men enlisted in the fight for Irish freedom for the discomfiture of one, even if that one be a leader of renown, to materially set back the movement. Time was when the "knocking out" of Parnell meant great disaster, but that time has passed.

IMPERIAL Federation has received a bad blow from the facts as set forth by Mr. Gladstone. The Federationists advocate a discrimination on the part of Great Britain against all the world not being colonial. It sounds very pretty that the old country should let in free of duty as it does now, all the produce of the Colonies and India, and should tax pretty heavily all foreign products. In our case this would mean to let in Canadian products, as now, free of duty, and to tax all the goods and products of Uncle Sam. This would of course mean the closing or partial closing of Old Country markets to sixty-five millions of people to accommodate five millions only. So with the rest of the world. To adopt the Federation "fad" would mean shutting out nations whose trade annually amounts to five hundred and fifty millions sterling, and the encouragement of a trade the annual value of which is one hundred and eighty-seven millions only. This would really mean offering five customers to please one. No business man would do that. The Imperial Federationists cannot succeed in their objects from this cause. A free trade country like Britain is not going to be so childish as to adopt any retaliatory measure whatever. Canadians need not look to that source for relief from their burdens. Reform must be commenced at home. In place of a high protective tariff which is oppressing ninety-nine out of every hundred, we must adopt a system of free trade. What has the mass of the people to fear from a change? Can the farmer, for instance, be any worse off than now? He knows by this time just what harm and just how much good the "tall chimney" craze has done him. Before shouting about the "Old Flag" and boasting of his loyalty it would be well for him to consider that he taxes the "Old Flag" pretty heavily for getting to the Canadian market, while the "Old Flag" country charges him never a cent for entering its markets, but on the contrary welcomes all that he can send with open arms. The Canadian had better take Sir Lyon Playfair's advice, and ponder over these words of his: "Canada could become one of the greatest and most prosperous countries in the world by

WAYS OF WOMEN FAIR

ANECDOTES AND ODD BITS OF NEWS ILLUSTRATING THE

Fads, Follies and Peculiar Notions of the Fair Sex—Something About Pins—Mine, Patti at the Russian Court—Notes on the Very Latest Fashions.

In the last 10 years 12,000 women have been divorced through the Chicago courts.

Mme. Patti is to be a guest at court in Russia when she gives her concerts at the Imperial palace at St. Petersburg this winter.

The Rev. Phoebe Hanford, author of "The Heart of Scoundrel," and a dozen other charming books, is one of the women of America who has never allowed her books, her sermons or her missions to subordinate the holiest duties of the hearthstone.

There is a new portrait of Lady Randolph Churchill out. It is naturally a charming picture of a charming lady, but the pose and the expression are devotional. A critic says, however, "No, her ladyship is entreating his lordship not to resign his seat in the cabinet."

Miss Helen Smythe, of Chicago, a taffey-haired, brown-eyed girl, goes cycling all over the West Side on her machine. A couple of years ago an ominous M. D. tried to prepare the picturesque Helen for the golden stairs. She wouldn't be prepared, but bought a three-wheeler, had a pilgrim dress made, mounted the cycle, and has been on wheels three hours daily ever since. It is needless to say that she rolls past the house of the would-be maker of angel choirs as often as convenient. Miss Smythe is one of the best teachers in the Chicago public school service.

Miss Ellen Terry's gowns for "Ravenswood" are triumphs of art in so far as the details of the period are concerned. She wears four different costumes in the play. One is a somewhat quaintly fashioned riding habit of a pinkish shade of red, and with this she will don a three-cornered hat. Another is a corsage and draperies of pink brocade lined with gray over a petticoat of pale green and white. A third is a simple little dress of pale blue material, made as plain as a stage gown ever is, and in all the greater contrast to the last gown, which is of white brocade and satin.

Miss Katie Drexel, discarded for the black robe and the name Sister Katharine, is now engaged in teaching some of the 300 little ones who call St. Paul's Roman Catholic orphan asylum, Detroit, their home. Her school is composed of the primary pupils of the vast establishment, and tenderly and lovingly she governs them and teaches them the rudiments of an education. Other rooms and departments are under control of other sisters.

NOTES ON FASHIONS.

Some of the new tea-gowns are ornamented with belts of polished ivory.

Gray is to be well worn this winter in combination with soft yellow and gold braids.

A ruffle around the bottom of the skirt is the distinguishing feature of all the new gowns.

Large-patterned brocades promise to be extensively used in combination with silk this coming season.

Queen chain pendants, representing braces of partridges in enamel and gold, are claimants for recognition.

A popular style in lace-pins is a small golden dagger, a cut intaglio, square in form resting on the blade.

An oxidized silver hair-pin is topped by a small circle through which passes a crescent set with garnets and turquoises.

Jewels, both real and imitation, will find favor this year, and artificial flowers will not be as much used as formerly.

One of the latest follies of fashion is a squirming snake tapering down to a point, which is thrust into the wearer's scarf.

The coat of arms which is sometimes embroidered on the skirt of a dress in heraldic colors must be the legitimate property of the wearer.

A English dressmaker who is trying to make a "hit," has made a bodice for a customer which is high on one side and low on the other.

Satin and gros-grain effects are both shown among the new silks. There are many heavy corded silks, soft as the bachelines but woven wholly of silk.

Hats are worn at any angle now. They

LORD BROUGHAM'S WIG

What Became of the Great Lord Chancellor's Gift to Charles Sumner.

In these times, when we keep so many relics of the by-gone days and preserve, with almost sacred care, every souvenir of some departed figure of history, it is curious to look back and note how little importance was attached, even in times just before the War, to articles which would now have incontestable historic interest. In this connection, the following bit of information from a former librarian of the Harvard Law School is of interest. It seems that when Mr. Sumner was in London in 1889 he became well acquainted with Lord Brougham, the great English statesman, who was then some 80 years old. Lord Brougham, on his part, conceived a great liking for Mr. Sumner, and when they parted he gave him his wig which he had worn when presiding in the House of Peers. Mr. Sumner accepted it with the idea of presenting it to the Harvard Law School as a curiosity, and at the time he wrote in regard to the matter to George S. Hillard, the historian:

"Lord Brougham has given me his full-bottom Lord Chancellor's wig, in which he made his great speech on the Reform bill. Such a wig costs twelve guineas, and then the association of it! In America it would be like Rabelais's gown."

When Mr. Sumner came back to America he gave the wig to the law school and also a case in which to preserve it. For some unaccountable reason care was not taken of it; in fact it was allowed to lie around the old law school. Dane Hall, and its associations were apparently entirely forgotten. The Hon. George S. Hale says that he found a fine old wig there one day, and, not knowing where it came from or whom it belonged to, used it for some private theatricals in Boston. Even the most democratic of Americans would hold up his hands in holy horror to know that the wig of the great Lord Brougham was so degraded! Finally, at any rate, it appears that the wig was thrown into the cellar of Dane Hall by some careless janitor. There it lay for many years until the Harvard Co-operative Society, which now occupies the building, took possession of the hall. About this time the workmen were filling in Holmes Field for a new athletic ground, and a heap of rubbish was taken from the cellar of the old law school and buried in Holmes Field. There is little doubt that Lord Brougham's wig was thrown in with this mass of debris and that new this—among the latest remembrances of one of England's greatest statesmen—lies within a few feet of the spot where the college boys stand and cheer the athletes of fair Harvard on to victory.—Boston Advertiser.

Suffer for the Family's Sake.

The number of aged men among the prisoners in the jails of India is said to be very large, and the explanation is this: It is a common practice when a thief is brought home to a man by the police for him to get an old father or uncle to take the blame on himself, or he puts up a younger brother to do so. Before the court they make full and circumstantial confession. They are convicted and the real thieves get off. It is done to benefit the family. A sturdy young man is able to do more for the family support by honest labor or by thieving than an old man or a boy.—N. Y. World.

Professor Boyesen thinks there is no country so democratic as Norway. Guess the Professor never consulted the election returns from Mississippi.

NAPANEE, FRIDAY, NOV. 21, 1890

TRADE commissioners have from time to time been sent from Canada to the West Indies. In 1885 Mr. Smith had a nice little trip there at the country's expense. In 1888 Mr. Jones took a jaunt, and Mr. Brown will be going in a few weeks. It is certainly a good thing to "stand in" with the present government for some pleasure-loving individuals. Perhaps Mr. Brown will find or make a market in the Indies for baled hay, of which there is a surplus here just now. Then again, perhaps he will not. His trip will cost the people something tangible; but for any other result the people may look in vain.

SOME who are generally well posted in regard to the federal government's plans say that the government expects to have the returns of population, according to the census to be taken in April next, in their possession before the end of the next session of parliament. If parliament meets in March it is not likely to be prorogued before July, and the government will make a "big push" to get the census returns before prorogation, so that they may be able to introduce a Gerrymander bill. The Tory leaders fear that unless they can get a redistribution measure through next session, the opposition may prevent the passage of such a measure before the end of the present parliamentary term.

INFERENTIALLY in one of last week's fly sheets, our contemporary, the Beaver, called Canadian shippers and exporters a pack of fools, inasmuch as for years they have been sending barley into the States at a low price when they should have sent it to the Old Country at a high price. Our own opinion of the matter is that the grain buyers of this country know their business pretty well, and when not influenced by party politics are very free in their expressions of the injury to our farmers which must result from any hostile legislation on the part of our neighbors. The Beavers should run up the Old Flag, and ask its readers to admire as it flaunts in the breeze; but to insult the understanding of business men in the faint hope that it is doing its party some service, is a huge blunder, for not even the dullest reader is deceived thereby.

it she only had a more profound conviction of the vast benefits of commercial freedom." Here is the rub, our present government does not want commercial freedom, on the contrary all its legislation of late has been such as to invite the enactment of such laws as the McKinley Bill.

Rival Telegraph Company.

WOODBROOK, Oct. 14.—The struggle between the two telegraph companies as to which should announce first throughout the world that Birchall was no more was an exciting one. The Canadian Pacific Company made a special effort to get the news to England. The Company did not get permission to put their wires inside the jail yard until midnight last night, but notwithstanding this at daylight this morning two wires were working direct from the jail yard to the cable station at Casco, N. S. One of which was connected with the French cable for the use of the Dunlop and Dalziel Cable News Association and the other with the Commercial Company's cable to be used exclusively by Reuters's Cable Agency. The instruments were placed on a bench within twenty yards of the scaffold. When the drop fell at 8.27 the news was sent forth, and within a fraction of three minutes later it was on a bulletin board in London, England, besides having during that time been carried to every part of Canada and the United States.

A Startling Contradiction

To the Editor of THE EXPRESS.

DEAR SIR,—There is an old adage that says "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country," and the saying is generally accepted as containing much truth. Indeed it is expanded into the generally accepted belief that true merit, whether it be that of an individual, or that of some medicinal preparation is much more likely to meet with popular approval at a distance than at home. Nasal Balm, acknowledged as being the greatest remedy for cold in the head and catarrh, ever offered the people of Canada, affords a striking instance of the fact that popular opinion, for once, at least is wrong. From the outset its popularity in the home of its manufacture has been unbounded and constantly increasing. In evidence of this we offer testimonials from two Brockville gentlemen who are known throughout the Dominion.

D. Derbyshire, Esq., Mayor of Brockville and for the past two years President of the Ontario Creamery Association, says:— "Your Nasal Balm is truly a wonderful remedy. I may say that I was afflicted with a distressing case of catarrh, accompanied by a number of its disagreeable symptoms. I had tried other remedies, but without avail, and well-nigh despairing of a cure, when I was induced to give Nasal Balm a trial. Its effects were wonderful, and the results arising from its use surprising. Briefly stated, it stops the droppings into the throat, sweetens the breath, relieves the headaches that follow catarrh, and in fact makes one feel altogether like a new man. No one who is suffering from catarrh in any of its stages should lose a moment in giving this remedy a trial."

James Smart, Esq., Brockville, Sheriff of the United Counties of Leeds and Grenville, says:—"It would be impossible to speak too extravagantly of the wonderful curative properties of Nasal Balm. I suffered for upwards of a month from a severe cold in the head, which, despite the use of other remedies was becoming worse and developing into catarrh. I procured a bottle of Nasal Balm and was relieved from the first application and thoroughly cured within twenty-four hours. I cheerfully add my testimony to the value of Nasal Balm."

These are but two illustrations out of the hundreds of testimonials the proprietors of Nasal Balm have had from all parts of the Dominion, but they ought to convince the most sceptical. (If your dealer does not keep Nasal Balm it will be sent on receipt of price—50 cents size and $1 large bottle—by addressing FULFORD & CO., Brockville, Ont.)

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and Lung Affections, also, all nervous and Nerve Diseases, and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

Something About Pins.

"Where do all the pins go to?" remarked a dry goods man yesterday. "Well, that is a hard question to answer. When one thinks of the enormous production of pins throughout the world, millions and millions made daily, it seems almost incredible that they should disappear in such a mysterious fashion. Do they get lost? Are they used up? Do they wear out, or don't they disappear at all, only in our imagination?"

"Statistics show," went on the gentleman, warming to his decidedly abstruse subject, "statistics show that there are manufactured in this country 150,000,000 pins annually; that is to say, 3,000 pins for every man, woman and child in the nation, or an average of about nine pins daily for each inhabitant, and yet I fully believe that if I should happen to need a pin, and should accost the first nine men I met on the street corner, not one of the nine men would have a single pin; whereas, to keep up the average, the first woman I accosted should have no less than eighty-one pins ready for immediate use. This is about the present condition of affairs, you know. Women are such adepts in the use of pins that I have seen some of them who could actually pin a button to a door knob. But that has nothing to do with the main question. However, I think if you want a scientific answer you had better not ask a man. If you do he will be obliged to reply, much as I do now, with the counter query equally important and equally meritorious: 'What became of last year's snowflakes, or with the money I gave my wife last week?'"

How to Wear Red.

Here is Mrs. Modjeska's opinion on the arrangement of color: "Red worn below the face deadens the complexion; worn above the face, heightens the complexion. If, therefore, a woman wishes to subdue the color in the cheeks she should wear a red gown or plenty of red ribbons about her throat; on the other hand, if she wishes to give her face a certain touch of color, let her wear a red hat or red flowers in her hair."

The Courageous Charley.

"Charley," she said, in a tone of alarm, as her husband was preparing to leave for his office, "you'd take good care of yourself won't you?"

"Why, of course. I'm going down to Wall street. There's no danger."

"But I've heard that Wall street is full of bulls and bears."

"That's all right. I'm one of the bear myself, and I'm not afraid of a couple of 'bears.'"

And he got 'em right in the mouth before he reached his office.

A Unexpected Pleasure.

Minerva Lapsusling—"I am surprised to find you in this beautiful day. No glad, though."

Mrs. Smoothleigh—"I had thought of driving in the park, but I am very glad now that I did not."

Minerva Lapsusling—"I always choose the fine days for calling. Nearly all my friends are out, and I get over so much ground in a short time."

Better Than Cosmetics.

You sometimes see a woman whose old age is as exquisite as was the perfect bloom of her youth. You wonder how this has come about. Here are some of the reasons: She knew how to forget disagreeable things.

She understood the art of enjoyment.

She believed in the goodness of her own daughters and in that of her neighbors.

She cultivated a good digestion.

She mastered the art of saying pleasant words.

She made whatever work came to her congenial.

She relieved the miserable, and sympathized with the sorrowful.

She did whatever came to her cheerfully and well.

She never forgot that kind words and a smile cost nothing, but are priceless treasures to the discouraged.

She did unto others as she would be done by, and now that there is a halo of white hair about her head she is loved and considered.

This is the secret of a long life and a happy one.

ring for my bouillon. After I have finished I take a cold bath and then my breakfast. Unless I am due at the theatre for a long, tedious rehearsal of four or five hours, I attend to my correspondence, sorting and answering various letters. After that is finished and my household duties are looked after, I go for my constitutional walk of two or three hours. I eat no luncheon, and when I return from my exercise it is nearly time for my dinner, for I dine at 4.30 o'clock. After this meal is over I have just a little time to rest before the real business of the twenty-four hours begins. I must be at the theatre at 7.30 o'clock sharp. At midnight I am home again, and after supper I go to bed. Now, this is a fair sample of my life. Every hour has its duties."

Real Estate Transactions.

The gains of Great Britain during the last ten years, some of them almost involuntary, have been prodigious—much greater, we sometimes think, than is altogether consistent with prudence. She has been forced to occupy Egypt, and to continue there, fixing no time for evacuation, except a date definite enough, perhaps in her own mind, but which seems to all foreigners more and equivalent for the Greek Islands. She has annexed Burmah, a greater kingdom, specially coveted by M. Gambetta, in perpetuity. She has extended her dominion in "South Africa" far beyond the dream of Sir Bartle Frere, once pronounced so wild, till it has passed the Zambesi, occupying great kingdoms en route, and low stretches up to the country of the Lakes. Finally she has seated herself in the best position on the coast of East Africa, a position from which, whenever Germany wears of playing at colonies, she may spread north and south till with one hand she touches Khartoum, and the other Madagascar and the Cape.

A WILD WESTERN CHESTERFIELD.

The Neat Compliment Paid a Pretty Girl

By a Bashful Cowboy.

Here is a very neat little story illustrative of the fact that even the wild and woolly west can produce a natural-born Chesterfield upon occasion. At a party given last winter was a bashful cowboy, who had not been in civilized society for several years. He was a good-looking fellow, and one of the young ladies present kindly took an interest in him and tried to make him feel at ease. He fell desperately in love at once, and the hostess noticing this encouraged him all she could. In leaving the house the young lady who had taken a friendly interest in the cowboy forgot her overshoes, and the hostess told the young Lochinvar from the plains that he might return them to the girl if he wished.

The herder leaped at the chance, and presented himself in due time at the young lady's house. She was surprised to see him, but greeted him cordially. "You forgot your overshoes last night," awkwardly, handing her the package.

She thanked him and opened it. "Why, there's only one overshoe here," she exclaimed.

"Yes, Miss—," said the blushing vacquer, earnestly. "I'll bring round the other one to-morrow, and I only wish to God, miss, that you were a centipede."

The Old Man Went, Too.

"Pop," said the small boy, "do you care if I go ter the circus?"

"Yes, sir, I do. Circuses are demoralizing, and there is no telling what may happen to you."

"But I want to."

"Got yer mind made up, have yer?" said the old gentleman, looking up from his paper with an expression of interest that was momentarily quickening into enthusiasm.

"Yes, sir," said the boy, with some hesitation.

"Nothin' will change yer?"

"No, sir" (with growing confidence).

"Ef I didn't give you the money you'd sneak in under the tent, an' maybe get arrested wouldn't ye?"

"Yes, sir" (with great positiveness.)

"Well, it never shall be said that I was the cause of my own child's gettin' arrested, and to make sure that nothing happens to you I'll go along with ye."

That Was Why.

"Why do you carry two watches?"

"Because I don't like to be hurried."

"How do two watches help you to avoid hurry?"

"They give me plenty of time."

GOOD RULES FOR THE GOVERNANCE OF YOUNG MEN'S LIVES.

Twelve Paragraph Regulations Covering in a General Way the Chief Points of Difference Between Right and Wrong Modes of Living.

The following letter from Henry Ward Beecher to his son is declared on good authority never to have been published. It is reminiscent of the worldly good sense of the advice given to Laertes by Polonius, but it is also permeated by the leaven of Christian experience. The precepts in it are those which if followed would produce a good man as well as a gentleman.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 18, 1878.

MY DEAR HERBERT,—You are now for the first time really launched into life for yourself. You go from your father's house, and from all family connections, to make your own way in the world. It is a good time to make a new start, to cast out faults of whose evil you have had an experience, and to take on habits the want of which you have found to be so damaging.

1. You must not go into debt. Avoid debt as you would the devil. Make it a fundamental rule: No debt—cash or nothing.

2. Make few promises. Religiously observe the smallest promise. A man who means to keep his promises cannot afford to make many.

3. Be scrupulously careful in all statements. Accuracy and perfect frankness, no guesswork. Either nothing or accurate truth.

4. When you are working for others sink yourself out of sight, seek their interest. Make yourself necessary to those who employ you, by industry, fidelity, and scrupulous integrity. Selfishness is fatal.

5. Hold yourself responsible for a higher standard than anybody else expects of you. Demand more of yourself than anybody else expects of you. Keep yourself standard high. Never excuse yourself to yourself. Never pity yourself. Be a hard master to yourself, but lenient to everybody else.

6. Concentrate your force on your own proper business; do not turn off. Be constant, steadfast, persevering.

7. The art of making one's fortune is to spend nothing; in this country any intelligent and industrious young man may become rich if he stops all leaks and is not in a hurry. Do not make haste; be patient.

8. Do not speculate or gamble. You go to a land where everybody is excited and strives to make money, suddenly, largely and without working for it. They blow soap-bubbles. Steady, patient industry is both the surest and the safest way. Greediness and haste are two devils that destroy thousands every year.

9. In regard to Mr. B——, he is a Southern gentleman; he is receiving you as a favor to me; do not let him regret it.

10. I beseech you to correct one fault—severe speech of others. Never speak evil of any man, no matter what the facts may be. Hasty fault-finding and severe speech of absent people is not honorable is apt to be unjust and cruel, makes enemies for yourself, and is wicked.

11. You must remember that you go to Mr. B—— not to learn to manage a farm like his. One or two hundred acres, not forty thousand, is to be your future homestead; but you can learn the care of cattle, sheep, the culture of wheat, the climate, country, manners and customs, and a hundred things that will be needful.

12. If by integrity, industry, and well-earned success you deserve well of your fellow-citizens, they may in years to come ask you to accept honors. Do not seek them, do not receive them while you are young—wait; but when you are established you may make your father's name known with honor in halls of legislation. Lastly, do not forget your father's and your mother's God. Because you will be largely deprived of church privileges, you need all the nerve to keep your heart before God. But do not despise small churches and humble preachers. "Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate."

Read often the Proverbs, the precepts and duties enjoined in the New Testament. May your father's God be with you and protect you.

On a Sunday Train.

Willie—"Mamma, isn't it wicked for us to ride on a Sunday train?"

Mamma—"No my son. We are on the way to church."

"It's wicked to work on Sunday, isn't it?"

"Certainly."

"Then it's wicked to run trains on Sunday, isn't it mamma?"

"I presume so. Don't bother me, Willie."

"But it isn't wicked for us to ride on 'em?"

"Hush, Willie. Look at your lesson paper."

"The man that run the train can't go to church, can they?"

"I suppose not. Quit talking, my son."

"That's the reason why it's wicked for them to run the trains, isn't it, mamma?"

"It is work of necessity to run these trains Willie. Somebody has to do it. Now, don't talk any more."

"You wouldn't want me to work on a Sunday train, would you mamma?"

"No, my son."

"But it's all right for me to ride on one, isn't it?"

"Don't talk any more, Willie?"

"I won't."

[Pause.]

"Say mamma, isn't it a good thing I don't have to work for a living? I might have to run on Sunday trains, you know, and that would be wicked, wouldn't it?"

"Willie, you must hush."

"But there's nothing wicked in my riding on 'em, is there?"

have become masters of the art by patient care and study. Even persons of ordinary ability will find upon making the effort that where it is not a gift no other deficiency can be so well supplemented by art. For the untutored there are three old rules which may not prove amiss. Talk to men on the subject which belongs to their peculiar callings, talk about those things which interest yourself, assuming also that they interest your listener, and make it a point to inform yourself upon a variety of topics; never be guilty of introducing in a mixed company a subject upon which all may not be able to converse. There is a wonderful faculty in drawing people out, in making the strangers and the timid feel at ease, in putting questions so skillfully and adroitly as to compel them to answer as though they were conferring a favor on you, not you seeking to entertain them; but here the rule of good breeding is the best to follow. Many of our city bred women excel in this elegant accomplishment, and some of our social gatherings, for wit, repartee and intelligent thought, bring to mind the historical salons of that queen of conversation, Mme. de Staël. But it is not always the most brilliant talker who is the most pleasing conversationalist; truth, deference, good nature, sympathy, tact and charity are the ingredients of the best conversation; without these the most sparkling wit and liveliest imagination must soon repel rather than attract. Above all shun doleful topics. Tears come unsought, unbidden. Make people happy by kind and gracious words. The world wants more sunshine. The wisest art in life and speech is to cultivate smiles, to find flowers where others shrink away for fear of thorns.

A Seal Resort.

St. Paul island is one of the chief resorts of the seals in Behring sea. For about 600 feet above the water the ground slopes gently and it is along this incline that the seals establish themselves, the coast for sixteen miles in some seasons being literally black with the animals. The males are very quarrelsome and fight for their positions, making a din almost deafening, which may be heard for miles. Here the young seals are born and nursed for a few days by the mothers, who then desert them, to be cared for by the older males until they are big enough to shift for themselves. The antics of the young when learning to swim are highly amusing. They flounder about in the water at first as totally helpless as a kitten. It is soon over, however, the seal being the most graceful of swimmers.

HAND AND RING.

He came almost immediately—came with his usual hasty step and with much of his usual expression on his well-disciplined features. Flinging aside the curtains, he cried impatiently: "Who is there?" But at sight of the tall figure of Imogene standing upright and firm on the piazza without, he drew back with a gesture of dismay which was almost forbidding in its character. She saw it, but did not pause. Pushing up the window, she stepped into the room; then, as he did not offer to help her, turned and shut the window behind her and carefully arranged the curtains. He meantime stood watching her with eyes in whose fierce light burned equal love and equal anger.

When all was completed, she faced him. Instantly a cry broke from his lips:

"You here!" he exclaimed, as if her presence were more than he could meet or stand. But in another moment the forlornness of her position seemed to strike him, and he advanced toward her, saying in a voice husky with passion: "Wretched woman, what have you done? Was it not enough that for weeks, months now, you have played with my love and misery as with toys, that you should rise up at the last minute and crush me before the whole world with a story, mad as it is false, of yourself being a criminal and the destroyer of the woman for whose death your miserable lover is being tried? Had you no consideration, no pity, if not for yourself, ruined by this day's work, for me, who have sacrificed everything, done everything the most devoted man or lawyer could do to save this fellow and win you for my wife?"

"Sir," said she, meeting the burning anger of his look with the coldness of a set despair, as if in the doubt awakened by his changed demeanor she sought to probe his mind for its hidden secret. "I did what any other woman would have done in my place. When we are pushed to the wall we tell the truth."

"The truth!" Was that his laugh that rang startlingly through the room? "The truth! You told the truth! Imogene, Imogene, is any such far necessary to you?"

Her lips, which had opened, closed again, and she did not answer for a moment; then she asked:

"How do you know that what I said was not the truth?"

"How do I know?" He paused as if to get his breath. "How do I know?" he repeated, calling up all his self-control to sustain her gaze-unmoved. "Do you think I have lost my reason, Imogene, that you put me such a question as that? How do I know you are innocent? Recall your own words and acts since the day we met at Mrs. Clemmens' house, and tell me how it would be possible for me to think any thing else of you?"

But her purpose did not relax, neither did she falter as she returned:

"Mr. Orcutt, will you tell me what has ever been said by me or what you have ever known me to do that would make it certain I did not commit this crime myself?"

His indignation was too much for his courtesy.

"Imogene," he commanded, "be silent! I will not listen to any further arguments of ted; that is, at five minutes before noon on the fatal day."

"Impossible!" exclaimed Mr. Orcutt, in his astonishment. "You are playing with my credulity, Imogene."

But she went on, letting her voice fall in awe of the lawyer's startled look.

"No," she persisted; "I was in Professor Darling's observatory. I was looking through a telescope, which had been pointed toward the town. Mrs. Clemmens was much in my mind at the time, and I took the notion to glance at her house, when I saw what I have described to you. I could not help remembering the time," she added, "for I had looked at the clock but a moment before."

"And it was five minutes before noon?" broke again from the lawyer's lips, in what was almost an awe-struck tone.

Troubled at an astonishment which seemed to partake of the nature of alarm, she silently bowed her head.

"And you were looking at him—actually looking at him—that very moment through a telescope perched a mile or so away?"

"Yes," she bowed again.

Turning his face aside, Orcutt walked to the hearth and began kicking the burnt-out logs with his restless foot. As he did so, Imogene heard him mutter between his set teeth:

"It is almost enough to make one believe in a God!"

Struck, horrified, she glided anxiously to his side.

"Do not you believe in a God?" she asked.

He was silent.

Amazed, almost frightened, for she had never heard him breathe a word of scepticism before—though, to be sure, he had never mentioned the name of the Deity in her presence—she stood looking at him like one who had received a blow; then she said:

"I believe in God. It is my punishment that I do. It is He who wills blood for blood; who dooms the guilty to a merited death. Oh, if he only would accept the sacrifice I so willingly offer!—take the life I so little value, and give me in return—"

"Mansell's?" completed the lawyer, turning upon her in a burst of fury he no longer had power to suppress. "Is that your cry—always and forever your cry? You drive me too far, Imogene. This mad and senseless passion for a man who no longer loves you—"

"Spare me!" rose from her trembling lips. "Let me forget that."

But the great lawyer only laughed.

"You make it worth my while to save you the bitterness of such a remembrance," he cried. Then, as she remained silent, he changed his tone to one of careless inquiry, and asked:

"Was it to tell this story of the prisoner having fled from his aunt's house that you came here to-night?"

Recalled to the purpose of the hour, she answered, hurriedly:

"Not entirely; that story was what Mr. Ferris expected me to testify to in court this morning. You see for yourself in what a position it would have put the prisoner."

"And the revelation you have received?" the lawyer coldly urged.

"Was of a deception that has been practised upon me—a base deception by which I was led to think long ago that Craik Mansell had admitted his guilt and only trusted to the excellence of his defence to escape punishment."

"I do not understand, said Mr. Orcutt. "Who could have practised such deception upon you?"

"The detectives," she murmured; "that rough, heartless fellow they call Hickory." And, in a burst of indignation, she told how she had been practised upon, and what the results had been upon her belief, if not upon the testimony which grew out of that belief.

The lawyer listened with a strange apathy. What would once have aroused his fiercest indignation and fired him to an exertion of his keenest powers, fell on him now like the tedious repetition of an old and worn tale. He scarcely looked up when she was done; and despair the first perhaps, she had every really felt—began to close in around her as she saw how deep a gulf she had dug between this man and herself by the inconsiderate act which had robbed him of all hope of ever making her his wife. Moved by this feeling, she suddenly asked:

"Have you lost all interest in your client, Mr. Orcutt? Have you no wish or hope remaining of seeing him acquitted of this crime?"

"My client," responded the lawyer, with bitter emphasis, "has taken his case into his own hands. It would be presumptuous in me to attempt anything further in his favor."

"Mr. Orcutt—"

"Ah!" he scornfully laughed, with a

"That you are what you proclaimed yourself to be this day, the actual assailant and murderer of Mrs. Clemmens. He has thought so all along, Miss Dare, why, I do not know. Whether he saw anything or heard anything in that house from which you saw him fly so abruptly, or whether he relied solely upon the testimony of the ring, which you must remember he never acknowledged having received back from you, I only know that from the minute he heard of his aunt's death his suspicions flew to you, and that, in spite of such suggestions as I felt it judicious to make, they have never suffered shock or been turned from their course from that day to this. Such honor," concluded Mr. Orcutt, with dry sarcasm, "does the man you love show to the woman who has sacrificed for his sake all that the world holds dear."

"I—I cannot believe it. You are mocking me," came inarticulately from her lips, while she drew back, step by step, till half the room lay between them.

"Mocking you?" Miss Dare, he has shown his feelings so palpably, I have often trembled lest the whole court should see and understand them."

"You have trembled"—she could scarcely speak, the rush of her emotion was so great—"you have trembled lest the whole court should see he suspected me of this crime?"

"Yes."

"Then," she cried, "you must have been convinced. Ah!" she hurriedly interposed, with a sudden look of distrust, "you are not amusing yourself with me, are you, Mr. Orcutt? So many traps have been laid for me from time to time, I dare not trust the truth of my best friend. Swear you believe Craik Mansell to have thought this of me! Swear you have seen this dark thing lying in his soul, or I—"

"What?"

"Will confront him myself with the question, if I have to tear down the walls of the prison to reach him. His mind I must and will know."

"Very well, then, you do. I have told you," declared Mr. Orcutt. "Swearing would not make it any more true."

Lifting her face to heaven, she suddenly fell on her knees.

"O God!" she murmured, "help me to bear this great joy!"

"Joy?"

The icy tone, the fierce surprise it expressed, started her at once to her feet.

"What?" she murmured, "joy! Don't you think if he thinks me guilty, he must be right? I am willing to perish and fall from the ranks of good men and women to be sure of a false further term."

ELECTRICITY

FOR MEDICAL PURPOSES, BY THE DORNWEND ELECTRIC BELT AND ATTACHMENTS.

THE WORLD'S BEST

All diseases curable by electricity can be treated at home by the Dornwend appliances. The Dornwend is the only legitimate Electricity Belt made which fulfills the requirements of a complete medical belt. It is a complete Body Belt, it has an independent battery, which generates a mild continuous current of electricity (without shocks) and can be regulated to suit the strongest man or the weakest child. It is a current of quantity, not merely of tension or force. It is a successful treatment for Indigestion, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Sciatica, Lumbago, Liver and Kidney Troubles, Weak Back, Spinal Disease, Heart Trouble, Nervous Debility, Paralysis, Vertigo, Female Complaints, Insomnia, Second Diphtheria, and all Diseases of the Nervous and Muscular systems.

Remember that the Dornwend Belt is the very latest invention in this line. It was invented by a competent electrician and ranks as the best in the world. We defy anyone to bring proof to the contrary.

Do not class this Belt with the humbug combinations of leather and metal with which the country is being flooded. If you wish to experiment with electricity, buy them, but, if you want to procure a genuine electric belt and one that will be of benefit get a Dornwend Belt.

Send name and address for illustrated Book on Home Electro-medical treatment, and mention this paper. The Dornwend Electric Belt and Attachment Co., C. H. Dornwend, Electrician, 1153 Yonge Street, Toronto, Canada.

The Dornwend Belt is the only one that will stand expert examination. Others keep clear of it, while we solicit it.

A Grandfather's Tribute to his Wife.

When, in the first flush of happy youth, I looked with loving eyes upon thy face, It seemed to me I there could find, in truth, The perfect type of beauty and of grace.

And as the bells rang out their gladsome chime

That day when we were wed, I did not dream

That ever, with the mellowing of time.

Could that sweet face of thine more lovely seem.

Yet, as I see thee now—thy crown of white:

The glory of thy motherhood; the lines

Upon thy brow and cheek, marks of time's flight:

The many sweetestnesses thy life combines—

Methinks that in my youth my judgment erred.

Despite thy beauty, seeming so benign,

This heart of mine hath never been so stirred

As by the loveliness that now is thine.

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. For children teething its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP for children teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price, 25 cents a bottle. B. sent by mail. Write Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP and label will be sent.

I still listen to any further arguments of this sort. Isn't it enough that you have destroyed my happiness, that you should seek to sport with my good sense? I say you are innocent as a babe unborn, not only of the crime itself but of any complicity in it. Every word you have spoken, every action you have taken since the day of Mrs. Clemmens' death, proves you to be the victim of a fixed conviction totally at war with the statement you were pleased to make to-day. Only your belief in the guilt of another and your—your—

He stopped, choked. The thought of his rival maddened him.

She immediately seized the opportunity to say:

"Mr. Orcutt, I cannot argue about what I have done. It is over and cannot be remedied. It is true I have destroyed myself, but this is no time to think of that. All I can think of or mourn over now is that, by destroying myself I have not succeeded in saving Craik Mansell."

If her purpose was to probe the lawyer's soul for the deadly wound that had turned all his sympathies to gall, she was successful at last. Turning upon her with a look in which despair and anger were strangely mingled, he cried:

"And me, Imogene—have you no thought for me?"

"Sir," said she, "any thought from one disgraced as I am now, would be an insult to one of your character and position."

It was true. In the eyes of the world Tremont Orcutt and Imogene Dare henceforth stood as far apart as the poles. Realizing it only too well, he uttered a half-inarticulate expression and trod restlessly to the other end of the room. When he came back, it was with more of the lawyer's aspect and less of the baffled lover's.

"Imogene," he said, "what could have induced you to resort to an expedient so dreadful? Had you lost confidence in me? Had I not told you I would save this man from his threatened fate?"

"You cannot do everything," she replied. "There are limits even to a power like yours. I knew that Craik was lost if I gave to the court the testimony which Mr. Ferris expected from me."

"Ah, then," he cried, seizing with his usual quickness at the admission which had thus unconsciously, perhaps, slipped from her, "you acknowledge you uttered a perjury to save yourself from making declarations you believed to be hurtful to the prisoner?"

A faint smile crossed her lips, and her whole aspect suddenly changed.

"Yes," she said; "I have no motive for hiding it from you now. I perjured myself to escape destroying Craik Mansell. I was, scarcely the mistress of my own actions. I had suffered so much I was ready to do anything to save the man I had so relentlessly pushed to his doom. I forgot that God does not prosper a lie."

The jealous gleam which answered her from the lawyer's eyes was a revelation.

"You regret, then," he said, "that you tossed my happiness away with a breach of your perjured lips?"

"I regret I did not tell the truth and trust God."

At this answer, uttered with the simplicity of a penitent spirit, Mr. Orcutt unconsciously drew back.

"And, may I ask, what has caused this sudden regret?" he inquired, in a tone not far removed from mockery; "the generous action of the prisoner in relieving you from your self-imposed burden of guilt by an acknowledgment that struck at the foundation of the defence I had so carefully prepared?"

"No," was her short reply; "that could afford me joy. Of whatever sin he may be guilty, he is at least free from the reproach of accepting deliverance at the expense of a woman. I am sorry I said what I did to-day, because a revelation has since been made to me, which proves I could never have sustained myself in the position I took, and that it was mere suicidal folly in me to attempt to save Craik Mansell by such means."

"A revelation?"

"Yes," And, forgetting all else in the purpose which had actuated her in seeking this interview, Imogene drew nearer to the lawyer and earnestly said: "There have been some persons—I have perceived it—who have wondered at my deep conviction of Craik Mansell's guilt. But the reasons I had justified it. They were great, greater than any one knew, greater even than you knew. His mother—were she living—must have thought as I did, had she been placed beside me and seen what I have seen, and heard what I have heard from the time of Mrs. Clemmens' death. Not only were all the facts brought against him in the trial known to me, but I saw him—saw him with my own eyes, running from Mrs. Clemmens' dining room door at the same time as

"Ah!" he scornfully laughed, with a quick yielding to his passion as startling as it was unexpected, "you thought you could play with me as you would; use my skill and ignore the love that prompted it. You are a clever woman, Imogene, but you went too far when you considered my forbearance unlimited."

"And you forsake Craik Mansell in the hour of his extremity?"

"Craik Mansell has forsaken me."

This was true; for her sake her lover had thrown his defence to the winds and rendered the assistance of his counsel unavailable. Seeing her droop her head abashed, Mr. Orcutt dryly proceeded:

"I do not know what may take place in court to-morrow," said he. "It is difficult to determine what will be the outcome of so complicated a case. The District Attorney, in consideration of the deception which has been practiced upon you, may refuse to prosecute any further; or, if the case goes on and the jury is called upon for a verdict, they may or may not be moved by its peculiar aspects to acquit a man of such generous dispositions. If they are, I shall do nothing to hinder an acquittal; but ask for no more active measures on my part. I cannot plead for the lover of woman who has disgraced me."

This decision, from one she had trusted so implicitly, seemed to crush her.

"Ah," she murmured, "if you did not believe him guilty you would not leave him thus to his fate."

He gave her a short, side-long glance, half-mocking, half-pitiful.

"If," she pursued, "you had felt even a passing gleam of doubt, such as came to me when I discovered that he had never really admitted his guilt, you would let no mere mistake on the part of a woman turn you from your duty as counsellor for a man on trial for his life."

His glance lost its pity and became wholly mocking.

"And do you cherish but passing gleams?" he sarcastically asked.

She started back.

"I laugh at the inconsistency of women," he cried. "You have sacrificed everything, even risked your life for a man you really believe guilty of crime; yet if another man similarly stained asked you for your compassion only, you would fly from him as from a pestilence."

But no words he could utter of this sort were able to raise any emotion in her now.

"Mr. Orcutt," she demanded, "do you believe Craik Mansell innocent?"

His old mocking smile came back.

"Have I conducted this case as if I believed him guilty?" he asked.

"No, no; but you are his lawyer; you are bound not to let your real thoughts appear. But in your secret heart you did not, could not, believe he was free from a crime to which he is linked by so many criminal circumstances."

But his strange smile remaining unchanged, she seemed to waken to a sudden doubt, and leaping impetuously to his side, laid her hand on his arm and exclaimed:

"Oh, sir, if you have ever cherished one hope of his innocence, no matter how faint or small, tell me of it, even if this last disclosure has convinced you of its folly!"

Giving her an icy look, he drew his arm slowly from her grasp and replied:

"Mr. Mansell has never been considered guilty by me."

"Never?"

"Never."

"Not even now?"

"Not even now."

It seemed as if she could not believe his words.

"And yet you know all there is against him; all that I do now?"

"I know he visited his aunt's house at or after the time she was murdered, but that is no proof that he killed her, Miss Dare."

"No," she admitted with slow conviction, "no. But why did he fly in that wild way when he left it? Why did he go straight to Buffalo and not wait to give me the interview he promised?"

"Shall I tell you?" Mr. Orcutt inquired, with a dangerous sneer on his lips. "Do you wish to know why this man—the man you have so loved—the man for whom you would die this moment, has conducted himself with such marked discretion?"

"Yes," came like a breath from between Imogene's parted lips.

"Well," said the lawyer, dropping his words with cruel clearness, "Mr. Mansell has a great faith in woman. He has such faith in you, Imogene Dare, he thinks you are all you declare yourself to be; that in the hour you stood up before the court and called yourself a murderer, you spoke but the truth; that—"

He stopped; even his scornful alibi would not allow him to go on in the face of the look she wore.

"Say—say those words again!" she gasped. "Let me hear them once more."

"Imogene, Imogene, would you drive me mad?"

She did not seem to hear.

"Craik, are you guiltless, then?" she was saying. Is the past all a dream! Are we two nothing but victims of dread and awful circumstances? Oh, we will see; life is not ended yet! And with a burst of hope that seemed to transfigure her into another woman, she turned toward the lawyer with the cry: "If he is innocent, he can be saved. Nothing that has been done by him or me can hurt him if this be so. God who watches over this crime has His eye on the guilty one. Though his sin be hidden under a mountain of deceit, it will yet come forth. Guilt like his cannot remain hidden."

"You did not think this when you faced the court this morning with perjury on your lips," came in slow, ironical tones from her companion.

"Heaven sometimes accepts a sacrifice," she returned. "But who will sacrifice himself for a man who could let the trial of one he knew to be innocent go on unhindered?"

"Who, indeed!" came in almost stifled tones from the lawyer's lips.

"If a stranger and not Craik Mansell slew Mrs. Clemmens," she went on, "and nothing but an incomprehensible train of coincidences unites him and me to this act of violence, then may God remember the words of the widow, and in His almighty power call down such a doom—"

She ended with a gasp. Mr. Orcutt, with a sudden movement, had laid his hand upon her lips.

"Hush!" he said, "let no curses issue from your mouth. The guilty can perish without that."

Releasing herself from him in alarm, she drew back, her eyes slowly dilating as she noted the dead whiteness that had settled over his face, and taken even the hue of life from his nervously trembling lips.

"Mr. Orcutt," she whispered, with a solemnity which made them heedless that the lamp which had been burning lower and lower in its socket was giving out its last fitful rays, "if Craik Mansell did not kill the Widow Clemmens, who then did?"

Her question—or was it her look and tone?—seemed to transfix Mr. Orcutt. But it was only for a moment. Turning with a slight gesture to the table at his side, he fumbled with his papers, still oblivious of the flaring lamp, saying slowly:

"I have always supposed Gouverneur Hildreth to be the true author of this crime."

"Gouverneur Hildreth?"

Mr. Orcutt bowed.

"I do not agree with you," she returned, moving slowly toward the window. "I am no reader of human hearts, as all my past history shows, but something—is it the voice of God in my breast?—tells me that Gouverneur Hildreth is as innocent as Craik Mansell, and that the true murderer of Mrs. Clemmens—"

Her words ended in a shriek. The light, which for so long a time had been flickering to its end, had given one starting flare in which the face of the man before her had flashed on her view in a ghastly flame that seemed to separate it from all surrounding objects, then as suddenly gone out, leaving the room in total darkness.

In the silence that followed, a quick sound as of rushing feet was heard, then the window was pushed up and the night air came moaning in. Imogene had fled.

Horace Byrd had not followed Hickory in his rush toward the house. He had preferred to await results under the great tree which, standing just inside the gate, cast its mysterious and far-reaching shadow widely over the wintry lawn. He was, therefore, alone during most of the interview which Miss Dare held with Mr. Orcutt in the library, and, being alone, felt himself a prey to his sensations and the weirdness of the situation in which he found himself.

Though no longer a victim to the passion with which Miss Dare had at first inspired him, he was by no means without feeling for this grand if somewhat misguided woman, and his emotions, as he stood there awaiting the issue of her last desperate attempt to aid the prisoner, were strong enough to make any solitude welcome, though this solitude for some reason held an influence which was anything but enlivening, if it was not actually depressing, to one of his ready sensibilities.

The tree under which he had taken his stand was, as I have intimated, an old one. It had stood there from time immemorial, and was, as I have heard it since said, at once the pride of Mr. Orcutt's heart and the chief ornament of his grounds. Though devoid of foliage at the time, its vast and symmetrical canopy of interlacing branches had caught Mr. Byrd's attention from the first moment of his entrance beneath it, and preoccupied as he was, he could not prevent his

THIS IS FOR YOU

Now is your opportunity if you are a man and want to buy clothes, Tweeds, or leave an order for a Suit or Overcoat or Pair of Pants. We have moved the Roblin & Ford Stock of Tweeds, Worsteds, etc., to Cheapside, our headquarters, and can give you the greatest bargains you were ever offered in this class of goods. The balance of this stock has been put in with the Slaven Stock, in the old Slaven Stand and we invite you there for bargains in Hats, Ties, Gloves.

If you are a woman we can interest you in the grandest bargains you ever saw in Linen Goods. We have just secured part of the Stock of a Linen Manufacturer, near Dublin, Ireland, bought at 50 cents on the $, and consisting of Linen Handkerchiefs, finer Table-Linens than any usually seen on sale in this country, at just one half their value. Linen Table Cloths all sizes, Table Napkins, Towels, etc., and we can surprise you with the elegance of design and finish, and better than all, with the extremely low prices.

We can surprise you with the finest range of Dress Goods and Trimmings in Central Canada.

We can surprise you with the best value in all kinds of Flannels and in the low prices of our White Blankets.

We can beat the World on Silk Sealettes. We bought a stock of these Goods larger than carried by most of the larger wholesale houses, at 60 cents on the $, and will sell you a Silk Seallette worth $9 for $5.50, and other prices in the same proportion; a fine Silk Plush worth $6 for $3.50.

We can beat all competitors blind on Velveteens of our own direct importations. A look at them will surprise you into a purchase.

We deal in Furs on a very large scale and manufacture all our best goods. Outskins being bought before the late heavy advances in price enable us to save you $5 to $10 on a Muskrat. We give you a much better garment than you can get elsewhere, and save you $3 to $5 on a Seal Cap and give you better quality ; $5 to $10 on a Coon Coat of much better quality than those shown by other houses. In short we can save you dollars and good thoughts from reverting now and then with a curious sensation of awe to the immensity of those great limbs which branched above him. His imagination was so powerfully affected at last, he had a notion of leaving the spot and seeking a nearer look-out in the belt of evergreens that hid the crouching form of Hickory; but a spell seemed to emanate from the huge trunk against which he leaned that restrained him when he sought to go, and noticing almost at the same moment that the path which Miss Dare would have to take in her departure ran directly under this tree, he yielded to the apathy of the moment and remained where he was.

Soon after he was visited by Hickory. "I can see nothing and hear nothing," was that individual's hurried salutation. "She and Mr. Orcutt are evidently still in the library, but I cannot get a clue to what is going on. I shall keep my watch, however, for I want to catch a glimpse of her face as she steps from the window." And he was off again before Byrd could reply.

But the next instant he was back, panting and breathless.

"The light is out in the library," he cried; "we shall see her no more to-night."

But scarcely had the words left his lips when a faint sound was heard from the region of the piazza, and looking up the path, they saw the form of Miss Dare coming hurriedly toward them.

Purify

The importance of keeping the blood in a pure condition is universally known, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood.

The taint of scrofula, salt rheum, or other foul humor is hereditary and transmitted for generations, causing untold suffering, and we also accumulate poison and germs of disease from the air we breathe, the food we eat, or the water we drink. There is nothing more conclusively proven than that the positive power of Hood's Sarsaparilla over all diseases of the blood. This medicine, when fairly tried, does expel every trace of scrofula or salt rheum, removes the taint which causes catarrh, neutralizes the acidity and cures rheumatism, drives out the germs of malaria, blood poisoning, etc. It also vitalizes and enriches the blood, thus overcoming that tired feeling, and building up the whole system. Thousands testify to the superiority of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. Full information and statements of cures sent free.

LAID UP.—The steamer Reindeer after a most successful season laid up on Monday last.

POSTAGE REDUCTION.—Regarding the reduction in postage rate. The Empire says that the announcement is decidedly premature, the cabinet not having considered the matter.

—Central Barber Shop is the nobbiest in town. First-class work guaranteed. 41cm P. A. Scott, Prop.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.—The municipal elections are drawing near at hand. Aspiring candidates are canvassing. Some of the old council will retire. The question is "Who will be mayor next year?"

ASSEMBLY.—The first assembly of the season will be given in the Town Hall on Thursday eve., 27th inst. A large number invitations have been issued to parties in Napanee, Kingston, Belleville, and Deseronto.

THE NEW ORDER ADOPTED.—The new order of administering the communion in Methodist Churches was adopted by the Western Methodist church on Sunday last. By the new order the congregation remains in their seats, occupying alternate pews, and receive the elements of communion with bowed heads.

—Grind by water every at Close's Mills.

COMPLIMENTARY.—The Picton Times in speaking of the foot ball match between the Public School Club of that place and the club from the Napanee College Institute, on Thanksgiving day, says: "The Napanee referees gave satisfactory decision in every case. His team and town may well be proud of him."

SOCIAL.—On Thursday evening last a social was held in the Western Methodist Church, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. After refreshment were served a programme was rendered which was furnished by the choir of the church and friends, which was highly appreciated. The receipts were quite satisfactory.

ELECTION TRIALS.—On Monday morning the election trial to contest the seat of J. H. Metcalf, M.P.P., for Kingston, opened before Justices McLennan and Falconbridge. A few instances of corrupt practice were brought out, but not sufficient to upset the majority. The case was dismissed on Tuesday morning. The trial to contest the seat of Hugh Smith, M.P.P., for Frontenac, began on Thursday.

RHEUMATISM.—It undoubtedly caused by lactic acid in the blood. This acid attacks the fibrous tissues, and causes the pains and aches in the back, shoulders, knees, ancles, hips, and wrists. Thousands of people have found in Hood's Sarsaparilla a positive cure for rheumatism. This medicine, by its purifying action, neutralizes the acidity of the blood, and also builds up and strengthens the whole body.

—Bruton for fruit.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Rev. George Jemmett, M. A., of Ottawa, died suddenly on Tuesday afternoon last, the cause of which being heart failure. The Bishop of Ontario regrets the death of Mr. Jemmett for he was a faithful and earnest preacher and always took a deep interest in his work. Deceased was father of Mr. F. Jemmett, formerly of the Merchant's Bank, Napanee, but who is now manager of the Gananoque branch. We extend our sympathies to Mr. Jemmett in his bereavement.

HYMNAL.—Richard H. Spencer was married recently to Miss Fannie Jane Trenton. The happy couple left for Detroit and Cleveland. The bride was the recipient of many presents.

CHEAP EXCURSION.—The Board of Trade is arranging for a cheap excursion from Tweed over the K. N. & W. Ry. to be given before Christmas.

A GREAT SIGHT.—A Kingston journal says that by standing on the tower of St. Mary Cathedral, Kingston, Napanee can be plainly seen. The reporter could not see a much prettier place.

SECOND REUNION.—Our readers are requested to remember the reunion to be held in the Church of St. Mary Magdalene on Tuesday evening next. A good programme provided.

FREE TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.—To all new subscribers to the Weekly Globe the balance of the year is given free. The Globe to Jan. 1892 for $1, or the Globe and Express for same period for $1.75.

—Bruton for fruit.

PARLOR SOCIAL.—On Thursday evening a parlor social was held at the manse, under the auspices of the Young People's Association of the Presbyterian Church. It was a successful affair and a pleasant time was spent.

A RESPONSE.—Rev. A. B. Chambers is not in accord with newspaper controversies, but last Sabbath he announced that on the following Sabbath evening as a prelude to his discourse he would reply to the letters published in THE EXPRESS of last week.

LEAGUE SOCIAL.—A successful social was held in the Eastern Methodist Church, under the auspices of the Epworth League on Thursday evening. Refreshments were served, after which programme was rendered. The receipts were most satisfactory.

LATE FLOWERS.—People who constantly state that this is a cold country can be met with the argument that flowers can be picked in the flower gardens as late as the latter part of November. On Thursday afternoon last Mr. T. S. Henry, bookseller, picked a bouquet of phlox and verbas from his garden and has them in his store.

ONE FACT is worth a column of rhetoric, said an American statesman. It is a fact, established by the testimony of thousands of people, that Hood's Sarsaparilla does cure scrofula, salt rheum, and other diseases or affections arising from impure state or low condition of the blood. It also overcomes that tired feeling, creates a good appetite, and gives strength to every part of the system. Try it.

—Bruton for fruit.

A GREAT RUSH.—The rush for THE EXPRESS last week was great and shows the popularity which this paper has maintained. The account of the Birchall execution was eagerly sought and although we printed many extra copies we could not begin to supply the demand. Our account of the execution was the first to be placed in the hands of the people of this section. We would advise people to subscribe and then they will be sure to get a copy every week.

THE FIRE ALARM SYSTEM.—At the last session of the Town Council the Fire, Water and Gas Committee submitted a draft of a proposed contract between the Town of Napanee and the Bell Telephone Co. for a fire alarm system. We are not in a position to state the purport of the contract as it has been forwarded to the head office to be ratified by the company. If the contract is adopted there is no doubt that Napanee will be placed into a lower insurance class.

FIRE.—On Wednesday evening last about 9 o'clock, after a lapse of considerable time the fire alarm was sounded. The fire was at the residence of Mr. S. C. V. The fireman, Bridge street. The fire was extinguished.

—A beautiful wolverine rug was presented to the mayor of Kingston accompanied by a letter hoping that it would keep his feet warm and his head cool while superintending the city fathers during his term of office which was hoped would extend over the next winter.

—Parties who contemplate making a Christmas present to their friends could not think of anything better than a live-sized picture. You should leave your orders with Hulet who has great reputation for first class work, and you will be sure of perfect satisfaction. He does them in either oil or ink.

It is well to be posted in the practical details of one's business, the more especially so when the business is exceptionally intricate. $10,000 was recently saved by the McCauslands, of Toronto, when an American specialist in the Stained Glass business found to his chagrin that this firm had been working for years the very item that he wished to dispose of, and which was supposed by him to be of recent discovery.

—A laughable incident occurred in one of the Kingston churches last Sunday evening. A young man rose to go out in the middle of the pastor's discourse. As he reached the door the good man said: "Even the vilest sinner may return." The young fellow gave a start and looked back as though to reassure himself that the words did not apply to him. The action moved many of the congregation to laughter.

—A present to a lady is sometimes hard to decide upon. Allow us to offer something that is perfect, useful, lasting and unique and the only that has never been complained of in the least; we refer to Furniture Protector Carpet Sweeper. For gentlemen we offer Elegant Carving Knives and Forks in cases, something finer than has ever been shown in Napanee before, and a lot of other useful as well as ornamental goods suited to everyone. the hearty congratulations of many friends in Napanee. P. W. DeGroot, of Napanee, was married in Watertown N. Y., last Thursday, to Miss Estella Spencer. They will live in Columbus in future. We offer our congratulations, and wish the couple a long and happy life.

"HAPPY BILL." DEAD.—The death of Major Cooper, of the Salvation Army, occurred in Toronto on Wednesday. He has never been well since his trip to England, where he took part in the mammoth meetings at London. He leaves a wife and two children. His wife was a Hamilton lady. The funeral took place in Toronto and was attended by the officers belonging to stations in the province. "Happy Bill" was well known in Napanee. He was here on many occasions in the early history of the army.

—Close's Mills grind every day.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—One day last week Mr. James Carson, son of Deputy-Reeve Carson, met with a serious accident while working at Parham phosphate mines. He was helping about the windlass while a heavy stone was being lifted. The brake slipped, allowing the lever to fly back and striking Carson in the forehead knocking him about fifteen feet. He lay unconscious for nearly two days, but has since been removed home. We are sorry to learn that he is not recovering as satisfactorily as could be desired.

CARTWRIGHT V STEVENS.—At Osgoode Hall, on Nov. 17th.—Before Galt, C. J. and Rose, J., the above case came up.—C. J. Holman, for the defendant, appealed from the judgment of Falconbridge, J., the trial judge, in favor of the plaintiffs in an action by lessors against their lessee, to recover $66 for two years' rent of certain premises, near the town of Napanee, and for a forfeiture, under the terms of a lease, for non-payment of rent. Fifty-one dollars was paid into court, there being a dispute as to a set-off. The action was tried at Napanee, and judgment was afterwards given for the plaintiff for forfeiture and for $4 in addition to the amount paid in court. The defendant contends that the plaintiffs having deprived him of a portion of the demised land, there was a suspension of the rent. Clute, Q. C., for the plaintiffs, contra. Appeal dismissed with costs.

—Bruton for confectionery.

THE OLD RELIABLE.—Every day adds testimony in favor of the view that all people in all lands are growing more and more in favor of that which is absolutely reliable. Whether dealing with men or things people want them, above all things to wear well, so that they can be depended upon. It is this healthy tendency that creates such a universal demand for that great and reliable weekly newspaper, the FAMILY HERALD and WEEKLY STAR of Montreal. It is safe to say that it is rarely that any enterprise in any quarter of the globe meets with such magnificent success as the FAMILY HERALD and WEEKLY STAR. It counts its readers by hundreds of thousands, and it is a recognized authority upon all matters of public interest. Those who have the FAMILY HERALD and WEEKLY STAR have a treasure, those who have not got it do not know what they are missing.

A GREAT SURPRISE is in store for all who use Kemp's Balm for the throat and lungs, the great guaranteed remedy. Would you believe that it is sold on its merits and that a remedy is authorized by the proprietor of his wonderful remedy to give you a sample bottle free? It never fails to cure acute or chronic coughs. All druggists sell Kemp's Balm. Large bottles 50 cents and $1.

was a lamp upsetting in the house, near the window on the east side of the house. The coal oil became ignited, and the flames burned the carpet and soon the curtains at the window were ablaze. The flames were extinguished. The window casement was damaged besides a chair which stood near the window.

APPRECIATED WORTH.—Mr. W. C. Scott, who for the past four years has been manager of the Bell Telephone Agency at Napanee has accepted a responsible position in the service of the Company, by which he will be travelling a good portion of the time. Since Mr. Scott assumed management of the agency at Napanee the service has been placed in a position equal to many of the services in the larger towns, and has been well managed and the appointment by the Company shows their appreciation of his worth. Mr. Scott will still reside in Napanee. We extend our congratulations.

BUSINESS IN NAPANEE.—People who do not live in town often labor under the impression that Napanee is not as brisk as it was in days of yore. Of course we understand their motive of so doing, but we will inform them that could they walk in our stores they would find them crowded with customers. The reason of this is that the merchants cater to the public and give them great inducements to do their trading here, and the people throughout the country appreciate it and come where they can get the best goods at the best prices. Still we are not satisfied, we want even more to become cognizant of the fact that they secure better bargains in every line by doing their trading in Napanee.

A FREE HOME.—A cottage worth $750 will be given to the person detecting the greatest number of typographical errors in the December issue of our monthly journal entitled "OUR HOMES." Three hundred and fifty additional cash prizes amounting to $2,800, will also be awarded in the order mentioned in rules governing competition. Prizes payable at par in any part of Canada or the United States. Send 15 cents in stamps, for complete rules and sample copy of "Our Homes," which will be issued about Nov. 20th. Address, OUR HOMES PUBLISHING CO., BROCKVILLE, CANADA.

FRUIT GROWERS and gardeners will find in the Canadian Horticulturist a beautiful monthly magazine, devoted to their interests. Being published by the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association, under government patronage it is conducted wholly in the interests of the farmer and fruit grower. Its object is to give information suitable to each month on the growing of small fruit, the management of the orchard, the vine yard, the flower garden and lawn. Special attention is given to the crop prospects and the report of market prices in our best markets for fruit and vegetables. It is proposed, in fruit season, to send out a weekly market bulletin free to subscribers. It also aims at exposing any frauds in the line of fruit trees and plants. The magazine is fully illustrated with colored plates and engravings, and when a year's numbers are bound in one, makes a beautiful book for a parlor table. This journal for one year, together with the report of the Ontario F. G. Association and a choice of plants for testing, all for one dollar. A special discount is made to any one getting up a club. L. Woolverton, Grimsby Ont., is editor of the journal, and secretary of the Association.

OPEN LODGE.—Napanee Lodge, No. 194, A. O. U. W. will give an open lodge in their room on Friday evening next, Nov. 28th. A good programme consisting of vocal and instrumental music, readings and recitations will be given. Remember the date, next Friday evening, Nov. 28th, at the lodge room in the Leonard block.

GLASS BROKEN.—The frosted glass on the right hand side of the delivery box in the post office was broken on Thursday afternoon. Small boys are in the habit of gathering the corridor and playing and wrestling and it is probable that it was in this way the glass was broken. Boys who have lots of money may do this and nothing will be said but if they are not in apportion to pay for the glasses whenever they break them then an objection will be raised.

CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—I beg to announce to my patrons, friends and the public generally that I have decided to discontinue the harness business in Napanee, and I take the present opportunity of extending to them my most hearty thanks for the liberal and generous patronage given me in the past. Changed conditions render this step necessary. Therefore, I propose to clear off my present stock of harness, whips, halters, brushes, currycombs, etc., at prices that will astonish the public during the next 20 days. I shall feel grateful to those indebted to me for prompt and early settlement of their accounts. Look out for bargains.

Geo. W. Goodwin.

CHURCH NOTES.

WESTERN METHODIST CHURCH.

Prof. Strangway of Albert College, Belleville, will occupy the pulpit of this church on Sunday next both morning and evening. The pastor will be in Uxbridge on that day. Prof. Strangway is an able and talented young man.

EASTERN METHODIST CHURCH.

Rev. A. B. Chambers will occupy his pulpit on Sabbath next both morning and evening. The subject for the evening will be "Capital Punishment." This sermon will be in part a reply to the views of Dr. Stafford on this subject, as published in the Globe on Monday last, and will therefore be of special interest.

Obituary.

JOSEPH GUNSLUS.

Last week we stated that Mr. Joseph Gunsulus, of South Fredericksburgh, was very ill, having been stricken with paralysis. We regret to learn that on Monday night last he died. He was seventy five years of age. Deceased was universally respected by all. We extend our sympathies to the family and relatives in their bereavement.

Where the Money Came From.

From the New York Herald, Nov. 13

This statement of Birchall is of great interest in reference to the trial.

"A good deal has been said about the funds used for the trial, and I give them, as it may interest the public to know what funds I used and whence I derived them. From my brother I received £100, from my sister £210, from my uncle £50, from an old Oxford friend, Mr. Lynch, £45; from Mr. Stevenson £45, from my aunt £10, from an old Lancashire friend £30, besides other small sums, all of which was entrusted to Messrs. Hellmuth & Ivey for the defence, making up a total of £500. Mr. Blackstock very kindly accepted the modest fee of £100, and the remainder was paid to Messrs. Hellmuth & Ivey. So the public may judge of the costs of my part of the business. A further sum of £30 was sent by my brother to defray the cost of the petition here. I should like before I go any further to make my readers understand a little more clearly than many of them who have not experienced it themselves understand it now the way in which money goes in law, and with that end in view I will just give them an example of lawyer's bills. At the time of writing Messrs. Finkle, McKay and McMillen have not been settled with, as their bills is over and above the balance of £400, which or its equivalent in cash will be given to the person detecting the greatest number of errors (words without spelled or misplaced) in the December issue of "OUR HOMES." In addition will be given two cash prizes of $200 each, four of $100, eight of $50, ten of $25, twenty five of $10, fifty of $5, one hundred of $2, and one hundred and fifty of $1, distributed in the order mentioned in rules and regulations, which will be sent with a copy of December issue on receipt of 15 cents in stamps. Special cash prizes given away almost every day during competition which closes February 1st, 1891.

ELECTRICITY IN THE CURE OF DISEASES. Attention is called to the Dorenweid Electric Belt. It is an invention of Mr. C. H. Dorenweid, of Toronto. It is essentially a battery in a belt, given a current of electricity can be regulated by the water, and is a diseased parts by attachments. The authorities pronounce it to be far ahead of orthodox method of applying electricity, can be used by anyone.
